

FAQs

- What is the significance of early childhood education? Why should I not send my child directly to formal school?

Research shows that up to 50% of a child's ability to learn develops by the age of 5. Proper preschool educational ensures an environment for this growth to take place. According to the US Department Of Education, preschool plays a large role in later academic success. Children in high quality preschools display better language, cognitive, and social skills than children who attended low quality programs. They have longer attention spans, stronger social abilities, and better language and math skills well into their elementary school careers, and are better performers in college as well as life.
- What is the right age to send a child to preschool?

Most experts call the child's 2nd year the miracle year. He/she can demonstrate amazing physical skills, think logically, manage simple tasks independently, speak few words or short sentences & happily stay apart from you for longer periods, etc. It is NOW that he/she gets the right stimulations and starts responding. The RIGHT ENVIRONMENT helps in developing the child's ability to learn, communicate, trust, love, and instills confidence and a positive self-esteem.
- What is the quality/background of teachers that we have? Do they speak well in English?

Experienced and loving teachers are our biggest strength. The carefully selected staff is trained regularly about latest developments on early childhood education, child psychology, health and nutrition by a panel of experts. Besides possessing good communication skills, they are also specially trained to groom little children into leaders of tomorrow.
